Fisher Phillips, one of the country's preeminent labor and employment law firms representing employers, announces that Evan Shenkman, Chief Knowledge and Innovation Officer, has been named a 2021 Fastcase 50 award winner. Shenkman is honored for his application of A.I. and data analytics at Fisher Phillips to assist attorneys with their client needs and is applauded for his prowess in leveraging emerging legal tools to help position the firm to be a benchmark for post-pandemic productivity.

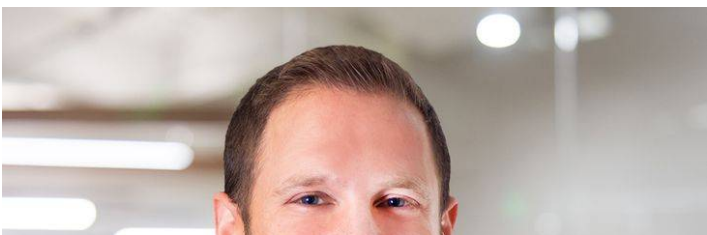

Each year since the inaugural awards in 2011, the Fastcase 50 award has spotlighted the efforts of pioneers and architects of the future of law and legal technology. The honorees for the Fastcase 50 Class of 2021 represent a diverse group of lawyers, legal technologists, law librarians, judges, legal researchers, innovators, and people who are passionate about reforming and automating the law.

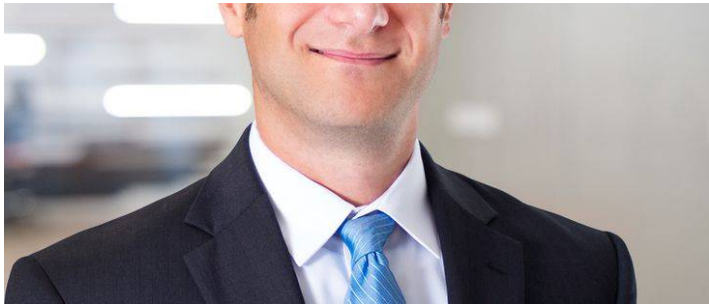

"The past year has presented challenges that provided opportunities to advance the law, and even accelerated some innovations into the mainstream," said Fastcase CEO Ed Walters. "We celebrate the diligence, discipline, passion, and creativity of these Fastcase 50 honorees. We are as proud as ever to spotlight the eleventh class of the Fastcase 50, highlighting now 550 people who have inspired our profession, since our first class in 2011."
