

Atlanta Partner Discusses Pandemic-Changed Work World

News

8.27.21

In an interview with the Atlanta Business Chronicle, Terri Stewart describes the new challenges employers are faced with as they try to recruit and maintain a productive workforce during COVID-19. Terri explains certain guidelines from federal and local agencies that employers should keep top-of-mind in the workplace as they may help employees feel more safe when returning to the office. She also explains that recruitment and retention of employees has proven difficult for many employers during the pandemic, a trend that she expects to continue. Terri notes that Georgia employers should be aware that many employees are choosing to work with companies that put their safety, and that of the community, first.
