

The Use of Social Media in the Discovery Process; One Attorney's Take

Publication

6.26.18

New York Partner Melissa Osipoff authored the New York Law Journal article “Private Facebook Posts Could Be Fair Game For Discovery.” In this article, she examines the decision in Forman v. Henkin that states New York employees may be required to provide information from their social media accounts regardless of their privacy settings. Melissa explains that this decision will prove useful for employers seeking disclosure of their employee’s social media profiles during for the discovery process.

To read the full article, visit the New York Journal. (subscription required)

Related People

Melissa (Osipoff) Camire

Partner

212.899.9965

Email