

How Employers Can Prepare for the Upcoming Flu Season

Publication

9.09.21

In a bylined article published in Construction Executive magazine, Curtis Moore discusses how employers should prepare for the upcoming flu season as the Delta variant of COVID-19 surges. Curt advises that employers continue to encourage vaccinations, offering on-site clinicians and posting articles about the vaccine. He also advises that companies follow COVID-related guidelines on work sites and additionally that they plan for COVID-related sick leave. “This fall and winter may bring considerable challenges due to the rise of the COVID-19 Delta variant with the seasonal flu. With the easing of mask requirements, the seasonal flu may come back with a vengeance this year. Only time will tell.”

To read the article visit Construction Executive.

Related People

Curtis G. Moore

Partner

704.778.4179

Email

Service Focus

Workplace Safety and Catastrophe Management

Related Offices

”

Charlotte