

Workplace Safety Co-Chair Interviews on Paid Time Off for Vaccines

News
9.10.21

In an interview with Bloomberg Law, Todd Logsdon discusses President Biden's time-off order that would require private employers to provide paid time off for their workers to be vaccinated against COVID-19 and to recover from any after-effects. Todd says that defending the use of the emergency rulemaking process could pose an obstacle for OSHA, whether defending the paid time off provision or a broader challenge to the vaccine and testing requirements. "They have to show that there's a grave danger so they don't have to go through the normal rulemaking process. It sounds like lots of groups are planning to challenge it, so we'll see how successful that is."

To read the article visit Bloomberg Law (subscription required).

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Todd B. Logsdon
Partner
502.561.3971
Email

Service Focus

Workplace Safety and Catastrophe Management

Related Offices

Louisville