In a bylined article for HR Executive Magazine, Marty Heller builds the case for why he thinks we are on the brink of a dramatic shift in the rules that govern pay transparency compliance. As evidence, he points to the expectation that the Department of Labor is about to release a wave of regulations regarding tip pooling, minors in the workplace and overtime. Marty contends the impetus behind this significant change is a drive to make compliance easy to understand. In the article, he urges employers to anticipate the shifting sands and to respond accordingly with compliance preparations.
