LOS ANGELES ATTORNEYS PREVIEW CALIFORNIA'S NEW LACTATION ACCOMMODATION LAW

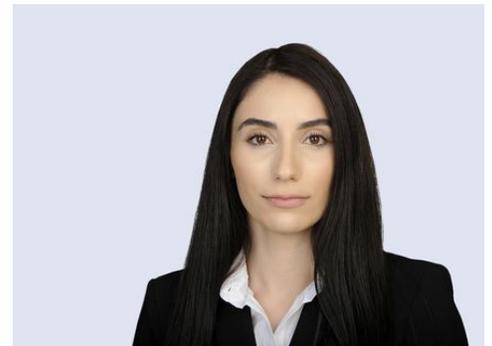

Publication
Dec 13, 2018

In their bylined piece for L.A. Biz titled "What you need to know about California's new lactation accommodation law," Los Angeles Partner Sarina Saluja and Associate Marianna Bertikian discuss Assembly Bill 1976, which, beginning Jan. 1, requires companies in California to ensure appropriate accommodations for breastfeeding employees.

Sarina and Marianna explain that the new law explicitly requires employers to provide a location other than a bathroom for an employee to express milk and impliedly requires that the lactation accommodation area be permanent. According to the law, if a permanent location is unavailable, a temporary one may be provided subject to certain criteria, and employers may also apply for an undue hardship exemption. Sarina and Marianna conclude by offering best practices and recommendations for employers.
