NEW YORK CITY PARTNER INTERVIEWED BY NEWSDAY ABOUT A NEW LAW EXPANDING WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTIONS

News
Dec 16, 2021

In an interview with Newsday, Melissa Camire weighs in on a recent New York state law that expands not only the type of claims that may be lodged against an employer, but also expands the statute of limitations to a claim. Protections will also be expanded beyond employees to include former employees and independent contractors. Employees who make complaints aren't insulated from disciplinary action for legitimate non-retaliatory reasons, Melissa said.

"Employers will want to ensure that there are well-documented, objective, non-retaliatory reasons for any such adverse employment action," she adds.
