REUTERS TAPS WORKPLACE SAFETY CO-CHAIR TO DISCUSS UPCOMING SUPREME COURT'S DECISION ON VACCINE MANDATES

News

Jan 5, 2022

Todd Logsdon spoke to Reuters ahead of the highly anticipated oral arguments that will take place in front of the U.S. Supreme Court on Jan. 5. The arguments are related to emergency requests in two separate cases by challengers including business groups, religious entities and U.S. states for orders blocking vaccine requirements. Challengers in both cases maintain that the Biden administration overstepped their authority.

“Employers are currently unsure how to proceed, with some concerned about losing staff in a tight labor market if they impose vaccine or testing requirements,” he said. “The quicker they can issue the decision the better.”
