Preparation is the Key to Successfully Managing an MS...

As mine operators are well aware, MSHA wields significant authority during an inspection. But operators that prepare to actively participate in an inspection will best position themselves during that process. In this episode, Arthur and Chris discuss some best practices for operators when interacting with an MSHA inspector during an inspection. They will also discuss what types of information company representatives should look to gather and share their experiences in how that information can lead to positive results during the settlement and litigation process.
