

Attorney's Article Focuses on Best Practices for Safety Professionals As Trial Expert Witnesses

Publication

2.07.19

Safety professionals are often engaged by attorneys to work as expert witnesses to help the attorney make certain technical arguments at trial or understand technical issues in a case. In a bylined article for Professional Safety, Louisville partner Todd Logsdon explains the differences between a testifying expert and consulting expert, and how the rules vary depending on the type. Logsdon concludes his article by saying, "Education, training and experience may qualify a safety professional to serve as an expert witness, but knowing the rules can improve one's effectiveness."
