

Regional Managing Partner Discusses Office Policy Changes Amid Omicron Spike

News

1.10.22

New Orleans CityBusiness quoted Regional Managing Partner Edward Harold in an article about local businesses considering new policies as Omicron, a more transmissible variant of COVID-19, makes its rounds.

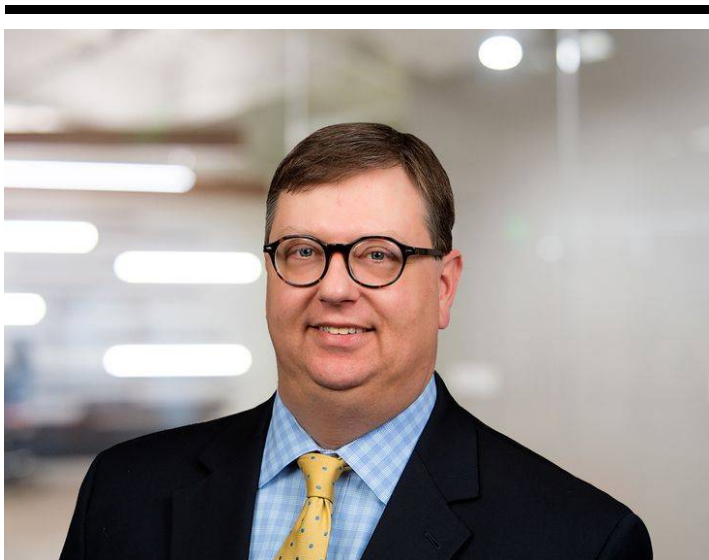

Harold said that if a business wants to put a vaccine or mask mandate in place or doesn't feel that five days of isolation is enough after a positive COVID-19 test, they can create stricter policies and enforce those while keeping in mind medical and religious exemptions.

"Right now it looks like employers are taking a look and deciding for themselves what's best, and they are free to do that in the absence of (government) requirements," he said. "You are free as a private employer to be more restrictive and do what you think works best for your business."

Read the full article in New Orleans CityBusiness.

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Edward F. Harold
Regional Managing Partner
504.592.3801

Email

Trending

COVID-19/Vaccine Resource Center

Related Offices

New Orleans