Now is not the time to let up. While some employers may be ready to relegate workplace safety to the back burner where it was before the pandemic, you know that's not a smart move. You're well aware that OSHA is going to flex its newly carved muscles in 2022, soon to be unleashing an army of newly hired investigators onto an unsuspecting public. But while you know you shouldn't just be crossing your fingers and hoping to be spared, you aren't sure what you should do now to prepare. Join the leaders of our Workplace Safety Practice Group for this exclusive webinar where we'll reveal the 10 most critical trends you can expect in the new year and provide practical guidance to help you on your way.

During this interactive 60-minute session, we'll discuss the state of workplace safety as COVID-19 seems to be in retreat, what OSHA initiatives and rulemaking you can expect in the coming months, and how workplace inspections will be different from here on out. Your long-range planning for 2022 won't be complete until you attend this can't-miss event.
