Change and disruption will be coming for employers on many fronts in 2022, and perhaps no area will be as volatile – and carry as much risk – as wage and hour law. A combination of factors, including the ongoing workforce shortage, an appetite for regulatory reform, an empowered labor movement, and an aggressive administration, will require employers to be on guard like never before. And when even the slightest misstep in an area marked by a complex web of compliance obligations could cost your organization dearly, you can't leave things to chance.

In this exclusive webinar, the leaders of Fisher Phillips Wage and Hour Practice Area will discuss the top 10 wage and hour trends that will impact employers in 2022, and provide concrete guidance to how you can proactively prepare for the changes we anticipate. You'll leave this interactive session with a clear blueprint for what you can do today to avoid trouble down the road.
