Michelle Anderson was recently recognized in Lawline's 'Top Women Faculty of 2021,' an annual list featured each year on LexBlog. The recognition celebrates women who taught some of the most-watched and highest-rated programs produced in 2021 on Lawline, a platform transforming traditional Continuing Legal Education (CLE) compliance.

Michelle, who has more than 30 years of experience practicing employment law, teaches a highly rated course titled What to Do When the DOL Comes Knocking.

"Our top women faculty not only persisted through a year of constant change, but they also skillfully shared their skills and expertise with the rest of the community, making a lasting impact on the legal profession at large," Lawline said in a release about the recognition.
