A screenshot of a podcast player interface. On the left is a red square with 'FP' in white, above a photo of a desk with a laptop and a microphone. Below that is the word 'Podcasts' in bold. To the right, the text 'Mining Matters' is above the title 'What should we expect f...'. Further right are icons for information, RSS, download, and share. At the bottom is a waveform visualization.

MSHA recently unveiled a new initiative, "Take Time/Save Lives" that focuses largely on training and "task awareness." Although policy initiatives such as this are not binding as law, they can provide an insight into the Agency's priorities and what mine operators can expect going forward. In this episode, Chris and Arthur review the "Take Time/Save Lives" initiative and offer their take on its potential significance and how mine operators can best prepare for what may come of it.
