Overview

Robert Smith, a Safety Professional (CSP) and Safety Consultant in the Fisher Phillips Workplace Safety practice group, brings valuable skills to any organization looking to enhance its safety compliance programs.

An experienced safety professional with a diverse background across manufacturing operations, management, business development, regulatory compliance, employee training and personnel development, Robert works with small to large companies to develop and deliver employee training, perform site safety audits, and leverage technology to improve safety cultures. He has significant experience working with clients in the construction, marine, healthcare, automotive, manufacturing, and heavy industrial industries. Robert's familiarity with OSHA regulations, coupled with a results-oriented approach to safety program management, helps him directly contribute to our clients' success.

Robert earned his Bachelor's Degree in Business Administration with a concentration in Human Resources and Personnel Development from Virginia Wesleyan University. He also earned a Master's Degree in Occupational Safety and Health from Columbia Southern University and is an OSHA-Authorized Outreach Trainer.
