

Louisville Partner Discusses Matter Involving Late-Stage Physician Competency Policies

News
6.08.22

In an interview with HCPPro's Credentialing Resource Center Journal, Megan U'Sellis discusses the late-stage physician competency policies that are front and center in a case involving Yale New Haven Hospital. Megan explains that recent court motions focus on one key issue: whether the Late Career Practitioner Policy and the related examinations are consistent with business necessity, as required under the ADA. She added that, with the lawsuit pending, healthcare providers should think twice before implementing late-career practitioner policies based solely on age.

To read the article visit HCPPro's Credentialing Resource Center Journal (subscription required).

Please reach out to our Media team for any news inquiries.

Related People

Megan Reese U'Sellis
Partner
502.561.3963
Email

Industry Focus

Healthcare

Related Offices

Louisville