Danielle Moore, founder of Fisher Phillip's Women Initiative and Leadership Committee was named among the Daily Journal's 2022 Top Labor and Employment Lawyers. She was recognized for her employment defense success across California and her work to further the advancement of women in the legal industry.

In her profile, Danielle discusses the complex landscape of employment law in California and details how she guides her clients in various industries including discrimination, wage and hour class actions, and PAGA claims. She also notes that "being able to see the big picture and advise your client on what is best for their specific business makes you a good business partner and, therefore, a good labor and employment attorney."
