Kristen Nesbit was named among the Daily Journal's 2022 Top Labor and Employment Lawyers. Kristen's profile highlights her high-stakes employment defense litigation work and successful outcomes for clients. One such case involved a major American airline where she successfully defended the first challenge to the airline's face mask policy brought by an employee in California.

Kristen is also profiled for her efforts to help diverse business owners succeed: "This is something I feel is incredibly important. Especially when starting out, sometimes owners are so busy just trying to get the business off the ground that they forget about protecting the foundation – the need to have employee policies, being mindful of employee relations and employee culture. Without those things, you can expose yourself to a labor and employment lawsuit."
