The holidays represent celebration and joy, but all that elation can set unsuspecting employers up for situations that feel like getting a stocking full of coal. In an article for Fast Casual, Louisville attorney Emily Litzinger recommends tips restaurants can follow to avoid employment-related liability this holiday season.

The article outlines what employers need to know about laws that address holiday pay and employee time off for holiday-related religious observances and provides 10 tips for throwing holiday parties that are festive without creating legal liability.
