In an interview with Inc. Magazine, John Polson is tapped for insight on how Professional Employer Organizations (PEOs) offer small and midsize businesses a long list of advantages, including services that help employers keep up with changing multistate regulations.

John says that the increasing complexity of regulatory compliance is a challenge that small and midsize businesses should not underestimate. This is especially true for businesses with employees in multiple states. “PEOs that service customers in all 50 states can shoulder many of the employee-related administrative compliance responsibilities for SMBs, allowing them to spend more time focused on managing and growing their businesses,” he explains.
