Attorneys in Fisher Phillips’ Los Angeles office recently added “author” to their bios as their work was published in the Practising Law Institute (PLI) “California Employment Law” treatise. The publication is a comprehensive, single-volume resource that delves into the statutes and case law governing the employer-employee relationship in California, providing practical guidance on the state, local, and federal rules and regulations.

Los Angeles regional managing partner Todd Scherwin and associates Ariella Kupetz and Naz Afshar authored chapter one: “The Employment Relationship” while Los Angeles partner Andrew Hoag and associates Lucy Bertino and Leora Ghadoushi authored chapter seven on “Age Discrimination.” The chapters provide key context for employers navigating the ever-changing employer-employee relationship in California and cover concrete, practical components of the laws that apply in the workplace setting.

Attorneys, compliance professionals, and HR specialists will benefit from purchasing and reading the “California Employment Law” treatise as a foundational guide for their workplaces. To purchase the book, please click here.
