Fisher Phillips, one of the country's preeminent labor and employment law firms representing employers, is pleased to announce that Amy Kullik has joined the firm as a partner in the Cleveland, Ohio office.

Amy served as the Chair of her previous firm's Litigation Group with extensive experience in all aspects of public and private sector labor and employment law. She is a first chair trial attorney known for defending employers in a wide variety of employment lawsuits, including claims of discrimination, harassment, retaliation, and wrongful termination as well as wage and hour collective and class actions.

"We are thrilled to have Amy join us as a partner in Cleveland," said Rich Millisor, Regional Managing Partner of the firm's Cleveland office. "Amy brings strong first chair trial experience that will complement our talented bench of litigators across the nation and here in Ohio, including the two most recent attorneys who joined the Cleveland office late last year. Overall, Amy is a great fit for the team as she shares our firm's passion for achieving our clients' objectives through focused employment consulting as well as skillful handling of high-stakes employment lawsuits."

"I am excited to join Fisher Phillips' robust national labor and employment platform," said Amy. "The firm is dedicated to partnering with employers to solve their most complex workplace issues, and I'm looking forward to making my litigation experience part of the breadth and depth of what the Cleveland office has to offer to employers throughout the country."

In addition to providing litigation counsel, Amy will also help employers of all sizes prevent workplace disputes by developing training and compliance programs on topics including interviewing and hiring, performance management, discrimination and harassment, and workplace health and safety. She will also draft employment contracts and policies and will partner with clients to address issues involving employee discipline, accommodations, and leave.

Amy earned her law degree from the Cleveland-Marshall College of Law and her undergraduate degree from Kent State University. She is ranked in Super Lawyers and is a member of the Labor & Employment Section of the Cleveland Metropolitan Bar Association and the National and local chambers of the Society for Human Resource Management.
