In an article about Qatar's major labor reforms, Doha News cites an insight co-authored by Mohamed Barry and Nan Sato. In their piece, Mohamed and Nan explain that employers around the Gulf region should create workplace regulations that adhere to local employment law requirements as well as ILO standards. Using Qatar's recent labor reforms as an example, the co-authors explain that "the reforms show that change is possible and will hopefully be a model for other countries in the region to follow." The article also cites Mohamed and Nan's 4-Step Plan for Gulf employers to follow.
