Fisher Phillips, one of the country's preeminent labor, employment, and education law firms representing employers, is pleased to announce that Suzanne Bogdan has been recognized as a Top Author for the Education Industry in JD Supra's 2023 Readers' Choice Awards. Suzanne was selected among thousands of published authors for her high levels of visibility and engagement with articles by JD Supra readers interested in content related to the education industry.

"It's a great privilege to receive this award, and incredibly rewarding to know that my timely insights are valued by JD Supra readers," Suzanne said. "The education industry is rapidly changing and facing unprecedented legal challenges and opportunities in both education and employment law. Readers are looking for real-time updates and helpful information to assist them with navigating today's new normal—and our team is uniquely positioned to provide the most relevant and timely content for educators across the country."

JD Supra's Readers' Choice Awards recognize top authors and firms who were read by C-suite executives, in-house counsel, media, and other professionals across the JD Supra platform during 2022. For this year's awards, the content aggregator closely reviewed its 2022 reader data, identifying 31 main topics for their timeliness as well as their proven, ongoing importance. In total, across all categories, only 303 authors from over 70,000 who publish on the platform were recognized.

At Fisher Phillips, Suzanne is a pivotal member of the firm's Education Practice Group. She partners with independent, private, and charter schools, as well as higher education institutions, to assist them in all types of employment and education-related matters, including claims for age, race, sex/gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, disability, religious, and national origin discrimination arising under the various civil rights laws. Suzanne works closely with many school accrediting agencies and associations, including the National Association of Independent Schools, the National Business Officers' Association, the Southern Association of Independent Schools, MISBO, the Mid-South Association of Independent Schools, and the Florida Council of Independent Schools to provide guidance on workplace policies and practices. She is sought after by both educational institutions and corporate associations for presenting on aspects of employment law and risk management in the employment context.

For over 25 years, the attorneys in Fisher Phillips' Education Industry Team have serviced independent schools and educational institutions of all types, including religious, secular, independent, private, and charter schools, as well as institutions of higher education. With more than 30 attorneys located across the country, the firm's Education Practice Group assists with education, employment, student, parent, and governance-related matters. Whether providing training and advice, conducting investigations, negotiating executive contracts, handling administrative charges, or defending litigation or appeals, the firm's lawyers provide practical solutions to achieve the best possible results at every step.
