In an interview with SHRM, Erica Wilson discusses the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's (EEOC's) latest guidance explaining the application of Title VII to automated systems that incorporate artificial intelligence (AI) in a range of HR-related uses. Erica explains that employers will need prepare for the Title VII implications surrounding their use of AI, and she explains that the latest EEOC guidance has put employers on notice "that they cannot simply pick a software program off the shelf, or write one themselves, and assume it works as intended without inadvertent bias. She also adds that "employers need to pay attention and test their employment-related AI tools early and often to make sure they aren't causing unintended harm."
