

New Jersey Breakfast Briefing: When OSHA Knocks – Best Practices for Navigating an OSHA Inspection

Event

6.13.23

9:00 AM — 10:00 AM EDT

Just because you aren't a large employer in the construction or manufacturing field, 2024 may be shaping up as the year that you get visited by a federal workplace safety inspector. New Jersey construction and manufacturing companies lead the pack, facing an overwhelming majority of inspections. But companies in a variety of other industries have been facing increasing attention from OSHA.

Fisher Phillips dives deeper into the inevitability that mid-size and larger New Jersey employers face a much greater chance of an OSHA inspection this year.
