Partner Matthew Korn talked to the media after the Supreme Court issued its ruling in Coinbase, Inc. v. Bielski, which he characterized as “good news” for employers seeking to move workplace claims from the courthouse to arbitration.

In an interview with Bloomberg Law, Matt explained that the outcome has the potential to make legal proceedings more efficient. “The idea is that arbitration is much more efficient, less expensive, less time consuming process, so the parties agree, if we have a dispute, let’s go to arbitration and handle it.”

And when asked about the potential impact on the long-term care industry, Matt told McKnight’s that “the decision should help employers in the long-term care arena to enjoy the benefits of arbitration agreements if faced with an enforcement challenge in court.”
