Overview

With three decades of experience in labor relations law, Octavio Novaro Holguín helps Mexican and foreign companies with operations in the country implement preventive strategies and audits to comply with applicable labor laws and advises on collective agreements with unions throughout the Mexican Republic. His clients span industries including automotive, pharmaceutical, higher education, retail, and energy.

Octavio frequently writes and participates in webinars, workshops, and congresses in Mexico, the United States, and Canada on the legal and practical labor-related issues affecting companies operating in Mexico.

He previously was a partner at a Mexico City firm serving the legal needs of domestic and foreign companies doing business in Mexico and a leading global professional services firm.
