MONDAY, AUGUST 28 SESSIONS

How To Protect Your Confidential Information, Customers and Employees if Employment-Based Non-Compete

12:45 PM - 1:45 PM EST

Speaker: Andrew Froman

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) last week recommended that Non-Compete agreements in employment should be banned. This will be a major concern for employers in many industries if enacted. Banking, financial services, technology, engineering, construction are only some of the many industries that rely on these agreements to protect their intellectual property, confidential information, trade secrets, customers, prospects and employees from raiding by competitors. But if these agreements are banned, does that leave employers with no recourse? No, it does not. Employers can still protect their confidential information, their customers, their employees from raiding. You still can fashion strict confidentiality provisions, and non-solicitation agreements with employees that are enforceable in most if not all states. This program will show you how to do just that.

3:15 PM - 4:15 PM EST

Do you sometimes find yourself dealing with squabbling employees or the workplace bully? Does your company have policies in place to address workplace conduct effectively? While they may not have a meritorious claim, employers are more frequently facing lawsuits following the termination or discipline of their difficult employee in this litigious environment. Learn how to avoid the traps employees can set, particularly when they are coached or encouraged by others and ways to deal with such issues head-on. This session will provide strategies to handle your most difficult challenges and preemptively recognize problems.

1:30 PM - 2:30 PM

Big data, analytics, artificial intelligence and human resource functions come together at a workplace crossroads that can have a big impact on how employers approach employee relations. Approximately 80% of human resource departments, currently utilize some form of these people analytics in connection with recruiting, hiring, performance management, compensation, training and other practices. But the laws regulating their use are murky at best, and non-existent at worst. Join this session for an interactive discussion designed to provide a baseline education in this evolving area of technology and law.
