Fisher Phillips, an international labor and employment law firm representing employers, is pleased to announce that Jacklin Rad has joined the firm as a partner in the Los Angeles office.

Prior to joining Fisher Phillips, Jacklin was an attorney with a national labor and employment law firm where she provided advice and counseling to California clients on workplace matters ranging from wage and hour, disability leave management, hiring and firing decisions, misclassification and pay equity issues. She also served in the California Labor Commissioner’s Office as Senior Deputy Labor Commissioner where she oversaw casework for up to 40 deputies in six district offices and advised the Labor Commissioner in developing agency policy and enforcement posture.

At Fisher Phillips, Jacklin will continue to advise clients across the state on the rapidly changing laws that govern the workplace, including pay transparency, and regular rate calculations, and will guide employers on workplace investigations. She is the twelfth attorney to join in Los Angeles over the past year and expands the firm’s advice and counseling capabilities in Southern California.

“Employers across California struggle to keep up with the flurry of new and changing laws that govern the state’s workplaces. Adding an attorney like Jacklin, who brings nearly two decades of experience addressing and resolving some of the trickiest employment law issues for business leaders, is a great fit for our clients who need a go-to counselor on these rapidly changing issues,” said Todd Scherwin, Regional Managing Partner of Fisher Phillips’ Los Angeles office. “Jacklin will immediately be an asset to our growing team of attorneys and our clients across the state.”

Jacklin earned her J.D. from the University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law, and her B.A. from Mount Holyoke College. The Best Lawyers in America have recognized her as “Ones to Watch” in Labor and Employment Law – Management and Litigation – Labor and Employment.
