OVERVIEW

Edwina Kye, a partner in the Seattle office of Fisher Phillips, specializes in guiding employers through the development of critical immigration programs, enabling them to attract and retain top talent from around the globe.

With a focus on navigating the complexities of immigration law, Edwina's efforts drive business growth for her clients while ensuring compliance and efficiency. She brings a wealth of experience supporting employers in all aspects of business immigration, including temporary employment visas, labor certifications, and permanent residency applications.

Passionate about enhancing workforces and fostering business growth through foreign talent, Edwina takes a hands-on approach to client engagements. She invests time in understanding each client's unique objectives, needs, and concerns, building trust and rapport necessary for success at a high level.

One of Edwina's recent accomplishments includes facilitating a research institution in the Pacific Northwest to secure government approval and become a J-1 visa sponsor. By developing a tailored program, she enabled the organization to hire skilled researchers and scientists rapidly and cost-effectively.

Clients spanning diverse industries, such as information technology, life sciences, finance, marketing, digital gaming, digital media & entertainment, startups, and sports, benefit from Edwina's nuanced approach to client service. Her commitment to delivering prompt communications and practical assessments of evolving laws and regulations enables clients to anticipate challenges and opportunities effectively.

Edwina's expertise also extends to conducting immigration due diligence for mergers and acquisitions, where she provides strategic counsel to clients navigating immigration matters during corporate transactions. She ensures seamless transitions for employees and compliance with immigration laws throughout the merger or acquisition process.

She writes and speaks on a range of immigration-related topics. Most recently, she was a panelist discussing "Alternatives to H-1B" at the American Immigration Lawyers Association's Fall 2023 Pacific Northwest Regional Conference in Seattle.
