Workplace activism is on the rise and with it, union organizing. Work stoppages – ranging from labor union-led strikes to spontaneous employee walkouts – are at historically high levels. Perhaps most tellingly, there is currently a 67% public approval rating of labor unions, well above the 5-year average. The pendulum has clearly swung toward change that could fundamentally disrupt the way you do business.

Are you prepared to respond to this new labor relations reality? The Labor Relations attorneys at Fisher Phillips can help. Join us for an immersive and highly interactive full-day labor boot camp training session that will boost your confidence and preparedness and arm you with answers to the complicated questions:

- What is the value associated with remaining union-free?
- What does – and what should - the union-free employer look like?
- What motivates employees to organize?
- What is the supervisor's role in keeping a company union free?

Space for this program is very limited and is reserved exclusively for clients and prospective clients of Fisher Phillips. Registrants will receive email confirmation of their reservation upon review of registration details.

If you have any questions, please contact Lance Godard.
