The Game has Changed but What Will the Future Hold?...

Earlier this year, the Supreme Court issued a bombshell of a decision in Loper Bright Enterprises et al. v. Raimondo, overturning the longstanding Chevron standard for interpreting ambiguous statutory terms. But while the Court relegated Chevron to the dustbin of history, it did not offer a roadmap for how statutory interpretation will look going forward. While all of this may seem academic, it has significant practical implications for mine safety. In this episode, Chris and Arthur discuss the Loper Bright decision and offer their thoughts on what this may mean in the area of mine safety going forward.
