Overview

Jillian Seifrit advises employers on data privacy and cybersecurity issues. As a Certified Information Privacy Professional (CIPP/US), she informs companies on privacy and data protection compliance such as, investigating incidents, responding to regulatory investigations, and determining notification obligations based on state, federal and international law, contractual obligations, and industry-specific requirements. Additionally, she counsels organizations in data privacy and information risk management planning.

Before joining Fisher Phillips, Jillian worked at a law firm dedicated to cybersecurity and data privacy. At this firm, she worked on hundreds of data privacy and security incident matters providing strategic incident response counsel including the discovery and containment of the event, third-party forensic investigation, and determination of any state and federal regulatory obligations.

She began her career working in state and local tax at a “Big Four” accounting firm where she worked on tax due diligence projects and advised on tax controversies as well as multistate tax issues.
