

Virtual Office

Our clients demand talented, experienced, practical, and efficient outside lawyers. At the same time, we recognize that many lawyers value more of a work-life balance, greater flexibility, and the opportunity to focus on the practice of law without a variety of additional obligations.

Fisher Phillips' Virtual Office gives everyone what they need.

The firm's Virtual Office is a team of experienced Fisher Phillips attorneys who work remotely and focus exclusively on employment law, free from the additional responsibilities that often accompany a traditional partner-track role. Many of our Virtual Office attorneys have previously been partners or senior associates at other firms or in high-level in-house jobs and now prefer a role that allows them to concentrate solely on practicing law – no business development expectations, fewer administrative duties, and little to no business travel.

The Virtual Office is fully integrated within the fabric of the firm and has its own team ethos with collaborative groupings of attorneys and team calls. Virtual Office attorneys have access to the firm's technology, systems, innovation, and other resources, and they are supported by a leadership team, administrative professionals, and litigation paralegals.
