Join members of the Fisher Phillips' Pay Equity and Transparency practice group for a webinar designed to help employers develop and deploy strategic plans around compensation adjustments for 2026.

Compensation adjustments are more complex than ever considering various state law pay transparency requirements mandating that job postings disclose detailed information regarding pay and benefits. What's more, compliance with wage and hour laws is daunting for employers, especially considering the prospect high stakes litigation risks. But, with a legally sound and well documented plan in place, employers can make compensation adjustments such that they are protected against risk, while seeking to reward and motivate their workforce.

This webinar will provide employers with the tools necessary to achieve both objectives and explore the benefits of compensation audit to ensure proper classification of employees and compliance with the rapidly expanding pay transparency requirements throughout the country. Attendees will come away prepared to approach compensation season with the confidence required to meet workforce compensation goals from a position of legal compliance.
