Mining Matters

What are you doing during the government shutdown?

With the ongoing lapse in federal funding, much of the federal government is not working. This has a direct impact on MSHA (Mine Safety and Health Administration). While inspection and investigation activity continues, other functions at MSHA are not operating. So, what are mine operators to do? In this episode, Arthur and Chris review what the federal shutdown means for operators, what ongoing responsibilities remain, and how mine safety personnel can best proceed during this unusual time.
