OVERVIEW

Natalia Stojanowska defends employers and businesses in a wide range of labor and employment matters, including wrongful termination, discrimination, reasonable accommodation, and administrative appeals involving unemployment benefits under federal and state law. Drawing on her dual qualification as an attorney in both the United States and Poland, Natalia brings a valuable international perspective to employment litigation and counseling — with demonstrated experience supporting clients through all phases of litigation from pre-suit investigation and discovery to trial and post-trial proceedings.

With hands-on experience in single-plaintiff and multi-party cases, Natalia handles a broad spectrum of employment law claims, including those arising in the construction and business sectors. She drafts pleadings, motions, and discovery, attends depositions and hearings, and supports trial preparation for complex employment disputes. Her background includes advising on wrongful termination, discrimination, and breach of contract matters, as well as counseling on internal investigations and compliance policies.

Before joining Fisher Phillips, Natalia was an associate at a regional litigation firm, where she represented employers in employment law disputes and advised on a range of workplace matters.
