OVERVIEW

Chris Turano represents employers and businesses in complex employment and commercial litigation, helping clients resolve high-stakes disputes while protecting their operational and business interests. An experienced trial lawyer, Chris has tried multiple cases to verdict in New Jersey Superior Court and regularly represents clients in federal court, particularly in the District of New Jersey, as well as on appeal.

Chris defends employers in matters involving whistleblower retaliation under the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act (CEPA), discrimination, harassment, retaliation, wage and hour claims, restrictive covenant disputes, employment agreement litigation, and other workplace disputes. He also represents businesses in a broad range of commercial litigation matters, giving clients practical insight into the employment issues that often intersect with broader business conflicts.

Drawing on more than 15 years of litigation experience, Chris represents private companies, public entities, educational institutions, and municipalities through every stage of litigation, from case assessment and discovery through dispositive motions, trial, and appeal. He also advises employers on internal investigations, workplace policies, employee handbooks, and other preventive measures designed to reduce legal risk and support sound employment decisions.

Before joining FP, Chris was a partner at regional and national law firms, where he represented employers and businesses in complex employment and commercial litigation throughout New Jersey and the surrounding region. His practical, business-focused approach helps clients navigate challenging workplace disputes with confidence.
