MONEY MATTERS: YOUR PAY DATA IS TALKING — ARE YOU LISTENING?

Event

Sep 9, 2026

12:00 pm - 1:00 pm EDT

Pay data reporting is becoming an increasingly important part of the pay compliance landscape, but preparing the report is only part of the story. What an employer's data reveals about its compensation practices can raise broader questions about pay equity, transparency, and potential risk.

Join the Fisher Phillips Pay Equity and Transparency Practice Group for a webinar exploring what employers need to know about pay data reporting and why it matters beyond the reporting requirement itself. As reporting and transparency obligations continue to evolve, understanding your pay data and identifying potential issues before they become problems is increasingly important.

During this program, we'll break down the pay data reporting landscape, examine how reporting intersects with pay equity and transparency, and discuss practical steps employers can take to prepare, review, and better understand their data. Participants will leave with actionable insights to help approach reporting with confidence, identify potential areas of concern, and strengthen their broader pay compliance strategy.

Space for this program is limited and is available on a first come, first serve basis.
