OVERVIEW

Ivy Ganguly advises employers on a range of contentious and non-contentious employment matters in the UK, including employment disputes, workplace investigations, restrictive covenants, workforce changes, senior executive employment matters and the employment aspects of corporate transactions. She works with multinational companies, financial institutions, private equity firms and other organisations on employment issues with both domestic and cross-border dimensions.

Ivy's experience includes advising on restrictive covenants and confidentiality obligations, whistleblowing, disciplinary investigations, redundancy consultations, TUPE transfers, employment status, and employment and consultancy arrangements. She also supports clients on the employment aspects of mergers and acquisitions and private equity transactions, including due diligence and the preparation and review of employment-related documentation.

Her contentious experience includes Employment Tribunal and High Court proceedings involving restrictive covenants, directors' duties and confidentiality issues. She has also supported clients on multijurisdictional projects involving equity incentives and employee share plans.

Before joining Fisher Phillips, Ivy trained at a leading international law firm, where her broader practice included commercial litigation and international arbitration.

Fisher Phillips operates in the UK through FP Law UK LLP which is a limited liability partnership formed under the laws of the State Of Delaware with its registered office at 1201 North Market Street, Wilmington, DE 19801. We are not currently authorized and regulated by the SRA although an application is pending.
