Service Focus

- Counseling and Advice
- Employment Discrimination and Harassment
- Litigation and Trials

OVERVIEW

Wilson Liu defends businesses in a wide range of labor and employment matters, managing all stages of litigation from initial case evaluation through trial preparation. He handles claims involving restrictive covenant and non-compete, employment discrimination, retaliation, wage and hour disputes, and wrongful termination under federal and state statutes such as the FLSA, Title VII, ADA, and FMLA. Wilson counsels employers on labor relations, employment litigation resolution strategies, negotiates settlements, and provides pragmatic, business-focused guidance to help clients minimize risk and achieve effective outcomes.

Before joining Fisher Phillips, Wilson was an associate attorney at a regional law firm, where he independently managed litigation for business clients. His prior experience also includes working as a legal intern with a university legal service, assisting with workplace and employment-related disputes.
