EHS Today has named 16 companies – Advanced Technologies and Laboratories International, Alberici Constructors, American & Efird LLC, Dresser-Rand, Great Lakes Construction Co., Honda of South Carolina, LP Building Products, Morton Salt, The Mundy Companies, Northern Improvement Company, Odebrecht, Raytheon, Rogers Corp. Advanced Circuit Materials Division, The Brock Group, Safariland LLC and Valdes Engineering – to the list of 2013 America's Safest Companies.

Combined, these companies employ more than 100,000 employees in the United States and represent industries as diverse as public infrastructure construction, textiles, facility maintenance, oil and gas, mining and heavy manufacturing. Despite their differences – worker populations that range from 100 employees to nearly 70,000, one facility or more than 100, diverse business models and a range of industries – the 16 America's Safest Companies for 2013 have integrated safety into the way they do business, treating EHS as a building block necessary for global business success. My personal congratulations to my longtime friends at Alberici!

Come to the EHS 2013 America's Safest Company in Atlanta on October 28th through 30th. We cosponsor this conference along with EHS Today. Last year, we received the best comments I have encountered in 30 years of speaking, so I am comfortable marketing for this great conference. [\[more information on Conference\]](#). I'm serious. Ed and I are excited about this year's presentations and the blue chip attendees with whom you can mingle and share ideas.
