OVERVIEW

Lino Parrales supports employers on labor and employment and social security matters in Mexico, with a focus on labor litigation.

Lino monitors labor proceedings before the Conciliation and Arbitration Boards, the labor courts and the Collegiate Circuit Courts, and he attends conciliation hearings and voluntary and involuntary separation proceedings. He drafts separation documentation, individual employment agreements, internal work regulations, documentation for the establishment of joint committees, statements of defense and other labor filings, and he supports advisory work for domestic and international clients in the pharmaceutical, automotive, film, real estate and logistics industries.

His social security experience includes administrative litigation before the Federal Administrative Justice Courts and amparo proceedings and related appeals concerning tax assessments issued by the Mexican Social Security Institute, along with the preparation of bond filings and memoranda.

Before joining Fisher Phillips, Lino worked at a Mexican labor and employment law firm and at an international law firm, where he supported the social security practice.
