OVERVIEW

Idin Kashefi pour represents employers in high-stakes labor and employment disputes, helping clients protect their businesses, manage risk, and resolve litigation with as little disruption as possible. His practice includes matters involving wrongful termination, discrimination, harassment, retaliation, whistleblower claims, and wage and hour class and representative actions, including PAGA matters.

With more than a decade of experience handling cases from pre-litigation through trial and appeal, Idin approaches each matter with a focus on both the legal issues and the client's broader business objectives. He takes the time to understand each client's operations, priorities, and risk tolerance, then develops a litigation strategy tailored to achieving practical and efficient results.

In addition to his litigation practice, Idin advises employers on workplace decisions, risk management, and compliance issues. His counseling is informed by his litigation experience, allowing him to help clients anticipate potential disputes, address problems early, and make informed decisions that support their business goals.

Before joining Fisher Phillips, Idin was a partner at a full-service law firm in Southern California, where he represented employers in a broad range of employment litigation and counseling matters.
