Australia's leading glass manufacturer, Viridian, is doing its part to ensure safe handling practices in the workplace and in the industry itself.

Ensuring employee safety is paramount to Viridian's workplace agenda.

Viridian's glass processing HR and safety manager John Findlay said, "We have been proactive in addressing safe glass handling and have implemented numerous initiatives over the last few years to ensure safety messages are communicated to all our employees and third parties within our business."

"As Australia's leading glass manufacturer and supplier, we have a responsibility to promote safe practices within our own organisation and to provide a leading example for the rest of the industry. As part of this role we provide free safety messaging materials to our customers and to third parties that we work with," Findlay said.
