OVERVIEW

Kate Hammock represents employers in labor and employment matters, drawing on prior experience in the insurance industry. Her background in risk management and evaluating business exposures gives her an understanding of the commercial considerations that can shape workplace decisions and legal strategies.

While in law school, she worked as a judicial extern for the Honorable Brian K. Epps, former Magistrate Judge for the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Georgia. Kate also served on the executive board of the Georgia Association of Women Lawyers (GSU chapter) and as an associate research editor of the Georgia State University Law Review.

Before entering the legal profession, Kate worked in insurance underwriting, evaluating risks and advising on business exposures, including employment practices and management liability.

Kate earned her J.D. from Georgia State University College of Law and her B.B.A. in Risk Management and Insurance from the University of Georgia.
