- Employment Discrimination and Harassment
- Litigation and Trials

OVERVIEW

From initial pleadings through discovery and settlement, Karla Sasing defends employers and public entities in employment disputes, bringing a valuable perspective shaped by representing both employees and employers. She drafts verified answers, responsive pleadings, and discovery-related motions, and prepares motions to compel to enforce discovery obligations and obtain responsive information from opposing parties.

Karla has managed a caseload of more than 50 active matters, conducted thorough case assessments, and negotiated with opposing counsel to pursue favorable outcomes. She has collaborated to develop case strategy and ensured compliance with court rules and deadlines throughout litigation. Her experience includes researching wrongful termination issues, analyzing deposition transcripts and personnel files, and drafting demand letters, complaints, and temporary restraining orders. She serves as primary client contact, keeping employers informed at every stage of their matters.

Before joining Fisher Phillips, Karla was an associate at a regional California firm, where she handled employment litigation matters from case inception through resolution. Prior to that, she advocated for employees and consumers at a plaintiff-side firm, developing strategies from demand letters through settlement. This background gives Karla valuable insight into how opposing counsel builds and pursues employment claims.
